It is easy to get lost in a world of diminishing moral values, especially when society tries to convince women that their worth is determined by how well they fit into a pair of designer jeans. What feels better than a perfectly fit pair of jeans? Knowing that you are precious to God and living like you believe it.

In a world where image is everything, the pressure to be perfect has never been more intense: the perfect make-up, the perfect outfit, the perfect size. But as society brashly asserts that a woman's value is wrapped up in how she looks, there is another voice—a softer voice—whispering her worth. Our Father in Heaven, in His infinite wisdom, sees not the outward appearance but perceives the beauty of the heart and the worth of a soul. Through meaningful stories, scriptures, and examples, motivational speaker Jodi Marie Robinson lovingly reminds daughters of God—of all ages, shapes, and sizes—that the only true path to happiness is to measure your value as the Lord does: “She is more precious than rubies” (Proverb 3:15).
