"I was 40. I was single. I was unemployed. I'd been divorced 5 years but I still hadn't met anyone new. I had a great career in television but my contract came to an end and I'm just not that good at networking. I didn't even own the house I lived in. Actually, I didn't even rent the house I lived in. For the last 5 years, I'd been "temporarily" staying at a friend's house until I worked out what I wanted to do with my life." This is Bridget Jones meets Man's Search for Meaning. Inspired by the book Eat Pray Love, in 2009 unemployed television producer Jennifer Page embarked on an "Eat Pray Love" year of her own. This is the story of that year. Her adventures take her to Uganda, Cambodia and a Jesuit centre in North Wales. She discovers the power of silence, starts her own charity and even publishes a book.
