Frammenti di una conversazione interrotta (Le Navi) (Italian Edition) Enrico Filippini

Da Barthes a Foucault, da Sanguineti a García Márquez, da Laing a Habermas, da Bobbio a Luhmann, da Guttuso a Frisch e Gregotti, le conversazioni di Enrico Filippini indagano su un tema cruciale del periodo che dalla fine degli anni Sessanta si estende fino alle soglie degli anni Novanta, ossia la «fine» o la «crisi» della Modernità. Primo di due volumi dedicati agli scritti di Filippini, questo libro raccoglie un'ampia scelta commentata delle interviste, realizzate prevalentemente per «la Repubblica», con alcuni dei più importanti protagonisti della scena culturale occidentale del secondo Novecento. Attraverso i più vari ambiti, anche disciplinari (dall'arte e la letteratura all'architettura, passando per la psicologia, la filosofia, la politica, ecc.), la ricerca filippiniana trova nell'Altro un momento di verifica che si traduce essenzialmente in una continua interrogazione dei linguaggi. Questa tensione conoscitiva si rispecchia in una scrittura pungente, ironica, irrequieta, che raggiunge vette di autentica intensità letteraria, in cui i confini tra il ritratto dell'Altro e la sagoma dello scrivente paiono dissolversi in un diario filosofico costellato di memorie e ricordi personali.
